INTO THE EVERYTHING RPG

A setting neutral game inspired by Mark of the Odd and Mini Six. It uses the basic framework, perks, complications, and XP of Mini Six: Bare Knuckle Edition; uses Into the Odd's d20 roll-under system and the general refinements offered by Cairn; it uses the skills from Fate Core; it adds Advantage and Disadvantage to account for difficulty; and it uses the magic system from Cairn & Knave.

CORE RULES

PLAYER CHARACTERS

How to Make a Character

1. Roll 3d6 for each of your character's Attributes (Strength (STR), Dexterity (DEX), Intelligence (INT), and Charisma (CHA), in order. You may then swap any two results. Alternatively, you may distribute 40 points between your attributes, where no attribute may be less than 5 or more than 15.
2. Roll 1d4+2 for your characters' Hit Protection (HP).
3. Select four skills your character is proficient in.
4. Select your character's Perks, if any.
5. Select your character's Complications, if any.
6. Select your character's equipment.

Attributes

Player Characters (PCs) have four Attributes:

- Strength (STR): Used for saves requiring physical power, like lifting gates, bending bars, resisting poison, etc.
- Dexterity (DEX): Used for saves requiring poise, speed, reflexes, dodging, climbing, sneaking, balancing, etc.
- Intelligence (INT) Used for saves regarding knowledge, mental creativity, wisdom, and memory.
- Charisma (CHA) Used for saves to persuade, deceive, interrogate, intimidate, charm, provoke, or lead others.

Attributes are not universal descriptors. A character with a low STR is not necessarily hopelessly weak; they can still attempt to lift a heavy door or survive a deadly fight! Their risk is simply higher.

Skills

Player Characters may select from the following skills. Starting characters are proficient in 4 skills.

- Athletics (STR): Climbing, jumping, and swimming.
- Fight (STR): Attacking and defending in melee combat.
- Physique (STR): Raw strength and physical resilience.
- Acrobatics (DEX): Dodging and and feats of gymnastics.
- Burglary (DEX): Breaking, entering, and casing locations.
- Drive/Pilot (DEX): Operating vehicles.
- Finesse (DEX): Perform delicate tasks or sleight of hand.
- Shoot (DEX): Ranged weapons and firearms.
- Stealth (DEX): Hiding and moving silently.
- Arcana (INT): Your knowledge of magical spells, items, and effects.
- Craft (INT): Repairing, creating, or modifying objects.
- Investigate (INT): Deductive reasoning and searching.
- Lore (INT): Book knowledge, history, and the supernatural.
- Medicine (INT): Aiding and diagnosing medical conditions.
- Perception (INT): General perception and situational awareness.
- Survival (INT): Tracking, hunting, and surviving in the wild.
- Technical (INT): Your knowledge of technology and science.
- Contacts (CHA): Gathering information and street networks.
- Deceive (CHA): Lying and creating bluffs.
- Empathy (CHA): Reading people and their emotions.
- Intimidation (CHA): Threatening or taunting others.
- Persuasion (CHA): Influencing someone through diplomacy or tact.
- Willpower (CHA): Mental fortitude and resisting manipulation.

If you are proficient in a skill, then you have advantage on any saves that use that skill.

Perks

During character creation, unspent skill proficiency points may be spent to acquire Perks. The following perks are meant to serve as examples and inspiration. The costs are listed in parentheses.

Racial Perks

- Dwarf (2): You're long lived, you can see in the dark, and you are proficient in the Craft skill. You have +1 to STR and -1 to DEX.
- Elf (2): You're long lived, you can see in the dark, and you are proficient in the Shoot skill. You have +1 to DEX and -1 to STR.
- Reptoid (1): You're green and scaly, this gives a +1 Armor Value. You also have claw-tipped fingers which grant you +1 damage on unarmed attacks.
- Robot (2): You don't eat, breathe, or sleep. You can have your memory wiped. You don't heal but you can be repaired. As long as your memory core survives you may be rebuilt if destroyed.

General Perks

- Attractive (1): Once per session, the character can re-roll for any action related to their appearance. Examples include seduction, a subtle bluff or simply distracting guards.
- Daredevil (1): Once per session you may throw caution to the wind taking extremely reckless action that may result in your own death, granting you a +3 to your STR or DEX for one action.

- Destiny (1): Characters with Destiny feel they are fated to some grand purpose. Once per game session a character may declare a failed roll is not part of their destiny and immediately reroll to get a different result.
- Favors (1): People owe you. Once per session, you can call in one of those debts. This can take the form of information, temporary use of equipment (borrowing a truck, plow, pump action shotgun, etc.), a place to hide someone or something for a brief time, or any similar event.
- Lucky (1): Once per session you can declare you are feeling lucky and my roll the next roll with advantage.
- Perceptive (1): The GM may reveal small clues to you that others would miss. Once per session, a character may announce they are studying an object or situation and the GM may reveal something that would be impossible for a normal character to determine. If nothing is revealed this perk may be used again.
- Recall (1): Any time the character chooses to recall anything he has experienced, the GM must tell him the truth in as much detail as the character would have been aware.
- Sidekick (2): You have a boon companion willing to join in your adventures. This character only gets 30 points to spend on attributes and 2 proficiency points to spend on starting skills. They normally only receive 1 to 3 XP per session, but never as many as their fearless leader.

Esoteric Perks

- Energy Blast (3): You can throw bolts of pure energy that do d10 blast damage.
- ESP (2): You can read minds. Targets resist using their Willpower (CHA).
- Flying (3): You can fly (at twice your movement speed).
- Regeneration (2): You heal 1 attribute damage per hour.
- Spellcaster (2): You're magically sensitive. Magic spells really work for you. Arcana is the skill check you make for spells.
- Telekinesis (2): You can move stuff with your mind. Make a Wits roll and treat it like the Lift skill. People resist using their Might.
- X-Ray Vision (3): you can see through 1 foot of material.

Complications

During character creation only, players may select up to two complications. These grant no additional skill dice during character creation; however, anytime one comes up in play the character earns one XP. Characters may not earn more than one XP per complication per session regardless of how often it comes up.

- Age: You're either really old or really young. In addition to all the social issues caused by your age, the GM might choose to impose a penalty to an action based on your character's age. Grandpa throws a hip, a weird dude offers you candy on the street, and it's hard for either of you to seduce the supermodel at the bar. Whenever your age causes you great difficulty receive one XP.
- Crazy: You have issues that are guaranteed to put the therapist's kids through college. Could be you're just really paranoid, or maybe just a touch too OCD. That fear of almost everything could also be a problem. Then again maybe you really are Napoleon and everyone else is wrong, good luck convincing anyone else since you're a lunatic. Earn one XP any time your psychosis really gets in the way.
- Enemies: Someone doesn't like you at all. And they are a credible threat. Maybe they have more friends than you, or maybe they're just bigger and meaner. Either way, you have your own personal bully. You earn the bonus XP when they complicate your life.

- Gremlins: You have a special touch. Specifically, the kind that breaks machines. You're no good with engines, electronics, magical gizmos, or any other trinket. If it's a device, you can't trust it. Earn one XP whenever the GM takes his one free shot on you this way.
- Personal Code: You live by a creed and you will not cross that line. Maybe you won't fight an unarmed opponent and always make sure they know it's coming or maybe you never tell a lie. No matter how you define it, your code has to mean something. Some caped crusaders won't kill, paladins won't resort to deception, and sometimes there is even honor among thieves. Earn one XP whenever your code complicates your or your friends' success.
- Skeletons in the Closet: You earn the bonus XP whenever your past comes back to haunt you.
- Unlucky in Love: Things just don't work out for some folks. You earn bonus XP when your love life falls apart in a meaningful way.
- Unlucky in Money: You have a hard time holding onto money. You earn the bonus XP when you lose a significant amount of cash through your own foolishness or bad luck and have nothing to show for it.

Inventory

Characters have a total of ten inventory slots but can only carry four or five items comfortably without the help of bags, backpacks, horses, carts, etc.

- Most items take up one slot unless otherwise indicated.
- Petty items do not take up any slots.
- Bulky items take up two slots.
- When characters gain 1 fatigue, it takes up 1 inventory slot.

Inventory is abstract, dependent only on the fiction as adjudicated by the GM. A character cannot have more ten inventory slots.

Gear

Some games may assume the character has the trappings of a middle-class lifestyle, while others may take place in a world of fantasy where only those items in your pack mean the difference between life and death.

Characters might start with one piece of related gear for each skill they allocated dice to during character creation. For example a pistol for the Pistols skill, a medic bag for Medicine, etc. For anything else, beg the GM.

Fantasy and Low Tech Weapons

- Unarmed Strike: d4
- Dagger, Cudgel, Sickle, Staff, etc.: d6 damage
- Spear, Sword, Mace, Axe, Flail, etc.: d8 damage
- Halberd, War Hammer, Long Sword, etc.: d10 damage, bulky
- Sling: d6 damage
- Bow: d6 damage, bulky
- Crossbow: d8 damage, bulky

Modern Tech Weapons

- Light Pistol: d6
- Heavy Pistol: d8
- Rifle: d10, bulky
- Shotgun: d12, bulky
- BFG: d12, bulky
- Grenade: d12 to everyone within 3 paces.

Sci-Fi Tech Weapons

- Plasma Pistol: d10
- Plasma Rifle: d12, bulky
- Plasma BFG: d20, bulky
- Plasma Sword: d12
- Plasma Grenade: d20 to everyone within 3 paces

Weapon Ranges Short / Medium / Long

Attacks against especially distant targets are Impaired.

- Bow: 10/30/100
- Crossbow: 15/45/150
- All Pistols: 10/50/100
- All Rifles: 30/100/200
- Shotgun: 20/50/100
- All BFGs: 30/100/300
- All Grenades and Thrown Weapons: 5/10/15

Fantasy Armor Value

- Shield: +1 Armor
- Helmet: +1 Armor
- Gambeson: +1 Armor
- Chainmail: 2 Armor, bulky
- Plate: 3 Armor, bulky

Modern Armor Value

- Armor Vest: 2 Armor
- Armor Jacket: 3 Armor

THE GAME MECHANICS

Scenes and Rounds

A scene is a single encounter, an ongoing challenge, or what would narratively be described of as a single scene in a film or TV show. Sometimes, the gamemaster may gloss over even the day-to-day activity of a group of characters to arrive at the next scene. For example, when traveling a long distance on foot, the GM might play out a scene in the starting village, then advance to the next scene near the destination or a point of interest, days later.

When scenes become action-oriented, and it is important to know who acts before someone else, the game switches over to timekeeping by rounds. When the matter at hand is settled or the story reaches the point where time is no longer tracked by rounds, the scene usually ends as well.

Saves

A save is a roll to avoid bad outcomes from risky choices and circumstances. PCs roll a d20 for an appropriate ability score. If they roll equal to or under that ability score, they pass. Otherwise, they fail. A 1 is always a success, and a 20 is always a failure.

If it is unclear which character should save in a situation, whomever is in more danger should make the save.

Example: Bea encounters a group of heavily-armed Goblins standing guard before a tunnel entrance. Her player carefully plots a course, recognizing that her 13 DEX makes sneaking past the guards the best option. She rolls a d20, and resulting in a 10 – a success!

Advantage & Disadvantage

A GM has the option of modifying the difficulty of saves using Advantage (where a character rolls two d20 and uses the higher roll) or Disadvantage (where a character rolls two d20 and uses the lower roll). When a character has both advantage and disadvantage, they cancel each other out.

Optionally, if you don't want to roll multiple dice, characters can add +3 to the players attribute for Advantage or -3 to the players attribute for Disadvantage.

Opposed Saves

If two characters are in direct opposition, both players roll a d20 and add their appropriate attribute. Whomever rolled the higher number wins the opposed save.

COMBAT

Rounds

A Round is roughly ten seconds of in-game in which all the characters can move and take an action.

During the first round of combat, each PC must make a DEX save in order to act. Special circumstances, abilities, items, or skills may negate this requirement. PCs that fail their save lose their turn for this round.

Their opponents then take their turn, and the first round ends. The next round begins with all the PCs taking their turn, followed by their opponents, and so on until combat has ended with one side defeated or fled.

Actions

On their turn, a character may move up to 40ft and take up to one action. This may be casting a spell, attacking, moving for a second time, or some other reasonable action. Each round, the PCs declare what they are doing before dice are rolled. If a character attempts something risky, the GM calls for a save for appropriate players or NPCs.

Attacking & Damage

The attacker rolls their weapon die and subtracts the target's armor, then deals the remaining total to their opponent's HP. Attacks in combat automatically hit.

Mark of the Odd style games usually have attacks automatically hit, but it's your game. If you want, make players pass a skill check in order to hit, let the target make a skill check in order to evade the attack, or both.

Hit Protection

Hit Protection (HP) reflects a character's ability to avoid damage in combat.

This measurement does not indicate a character's health or fortitude, nor do they lose it for very long.

Attack Modifiers

If fighting from a position of weakness (such as through cover or with bound hands), the attack is Impaired, and the attacker must roll 1d4 damage regardless of the attack's damage die. Unarmed attacks always do d4 damage.

If fighting from a position of advantage (such as against a helpless foe or through a daring maneuver), the attack is Enhanced, allowing the attacker to roll 1d12 damage instead of their normal die.

Attacks with the Blast quality affect all targets in the noted area, rolling separately for each affected character. This can be anything from explosions to a dragon's breath or the impact of a meteorite. If unsure how many targets can be affected, roll the related damage die for a result.

If attacking with two weapons at the same time, roll both damage dice and keep the single highest result (denoted with a plus symbol, e.g. d8+d8).

Detachments

Large groups of similar combatants fighting together are treated as a single Detachment. When a Detachment takes critical damage, it is routed or significantly weakened. When it reaches 0 STR, it is destroyed.

Attacks against Detachments by individuals are impaired (excluding blast damage).

Attacks against individuals by Detachments are enhanced and deal blast damage.

Armor

Before calculating damage to HP, subtract the target's Armor value from the result of damage rolls. Shields and similar armor provide a bonus defense (e.g. +1 Armor), but only while the item is held or worn. Some may also provide additional benefits, depending on the fiction. A PC, NPC, or monster cannot have more than 3 Armor.

Critical Damage

Damage that reduces a target's HP below zero is subtracted from their STR by the amount of damage remaining. The target must then immediately make a STR save to avoid taking Critical Damage, using their new STR score. On a success, the target is still in the fight (albeit with a lower STR score) and must continue to make critical damage saves when incurring damage.

Any PC that suffers Critical Damage cannot do anything but crawl weakly, grasping for life. If given aid (such as bandages), they will stabilize. If left untreated, they die within the hour.

NPCs and monsters that fail a Critical Damage save are considered dead, per the GM's discretion. Additionally, some enemies will have special abilities or effects that are triggered when their target fails a critical damage save.

Attribute Loss

If a PC takes damage outside of combat, they should instead receive damage to an Attribute, typically STR.

If a PC's STR is reduced to 0, they die. If their DEX is reduced to 0, they are paralyzed. If their INT or CHA is reduced to 0, they are delirious.

Deprivation & Fatigue

A PC that lacks a crucial need (such as food or rest) is Deprived. Anyone Deprived for more than a day adds Fatigue to their inventory, one for each day. A Deprived PC cannot recover HP, Attributes, or item slots from Fatigue.

A PC may also be forced to add Fatigue after casting spells or due to events occurring in the fiction. Each Fatigue occupies one slot and lasts until the PC is able to recuperate (such as with a full night's rest in a safe spot).

If a character is forced to add Fatigue to their inventory but they have no free slots, they must drop an item from their inventory.

Healing & Recovery

Resting for a few moments and having a drink of water restores lost HP but may leave the party exposed. Bandages can stabilize a character that has taken critical damage.

Attribute loss can usually be restored with a week's rest, facilitated by a healer or other appropriate source of expertise.

Some healing services are free, while magical or more expedient means of recovery may come at a cost.

EXPERIENCE

At the end of each session the GM awards each character a number of experience points. The number of points given per session typically varies from 3 to 7 depending on drama, danger, success, and fun!

Spending experience points (XP)

- Any skill may be made proficient at the cost of 20 XP.
- Any attribute may be used to increased by 1 at the cost of 20 + your current attribute.
- At the GMs discretion, players may gain perks at the cost of 15 XP per point the perk normally costs.

VEHICLES

All vehicles from ancient chariots to futuristic starships are defined by a common set of statistics. The following stats help the GM and players quickly resolve all actions related to vehicles.

- Scale: The size of the vehicle.
- Body: This is the save the vehicle uses to resist damage.
- HP: How damage is tracked. When it reaches 0, a Body save is made.
- Maneuverability: How easy the vehicle is to handle. This tells if the Drive/Pilot skill save is made with Advantage or Disadvantage.

- Speed: How fast it can travel, relative to vehicles of similar types.
- Crew: The number needed to successfully operate the vehicle.
- Passengers (Psg): Non-crew capacity.
- Weapons: Any armaments mounted on the vehicle.
- Cargo: How much stuff it can carry.

Vehicle Combat

Some vehicles have weapons. Unless specified in their descriptions they are considered to be the same scale as the vehicle. Attacks are resolved in the similar manner as character vs. character combat with the only difference being the character uses their Drive/Pilot (DEX) skill to defend.

Scale Factor

Not all objects are on the same scale. Humans and horses may be close enough to be equals, but humans and dragons aren't. When things that are different scales engage in combat, compare their scale factor.

When a bigger thing attacks a smaller thing: The attack is at least Enhanced, but the defender may save to avoid the attack, perhaps with Advantage. Optionally, when a bigger thing attacks a smaller thing, you may ignore the defender's armor.

When a smaller thing attacks a larger thing: If it's even possible to damage the target, the attack is Impaired.

Damage Effect

All vehicles have 3 armor.

When they take damage, the vehicle must make a Body check to see if its systems are affected. If the save is failed, one of the following will happen, based on the severity of the damage.

1. Overloaded System: Temporary effect for one round.
2. Damaged System: Permanent effect until repaired.
3. Destroyed System: Permanent effect until parts replaced.

Then the GM may roll randomly on the the following chart or use common sense to determine which part is damaged.

Roll 1d6: Effect

- 1: Disadvantage on Maneuverability
- 2 to 3: Random System Damaged
- 4 to 6: Structural Damage

Effects of Damage

- Maneuverability: When maneuverability becomes damaged, the vehicle has Disadvantage on Drive/Pilot saves.
- System Damaged: Randomly select a vehicle's system and it either becomes broken or loses 1d6 from its rating (if applicable). Examples include communications/radio, sensors, shielding, sail, rigging, armor, etc.
- Structural Damage: The vehicle receives one wound level. Treat these like character wound levels. Mortally wounded vehicles stop functioning and "dead" vehicles are considered destroyed.

Ramming

When vehicles are at short range, a pursuer may try to ram. The attacker and the defender make Drive/Pilot saves, and whomever fails that save takes d8 damage.

Weapon Ranges in Space

Space is big and empty. Guns shoot great distances and ships are extremely fast. The ranges given are abstract units that are defined by the needs of the individual game.

Chases

When attempting to overtake or outrun an opponent the GM determines what range you are at (Short/Medium/Long). Each turn each vehicle makes a Drive/Pilot save check, with the faster vehicle gaining Advantage on the check. If both parties save or fail, there is no change. If only one party succeeds, then they can decide to increase or decrease the distance between the two vehicles.

Repairing Vehicles

Characters may repair vehicles using their skills. The difficulty and cost is determined on the following chart. The cost is based on the price of a new vehicle.

- Light damage: Advantage to fix. Takes 1 Hour + costs.
- Medium damage: Standard roll to fix. Takes 4 Hours + costs.
- Heavy damage: Disadvantage to fix. Takes 1 Day + costs.

Sample Fantasy Vehicles

Air Ship:: Cost: Only the richest individuals, most governments. Scale: Large, Maneuverability: Disadvantage, Body/HP: 7, Speed: Very Slow, Crew: 4, Psg: 12, Cargo: 2 tons.

Automaton: Cost: Only the richest individuals, most governments. Scale: Medium, Maneuverability: Disadvantage, Body/HP: 14, Speed: Very Slow, Crew: 1, Psg: 0, Cargo: None, Weapon: Mace (d6), range: melee.

Galleon: Cost: Affordable to the very wealthy, governments, and corps. Scale: Large, Maneuverability: Disadvantage, Body/HP: 14, Speed: Moderate, Crew: 70, Psg: 30, Cargo: 15 tons, Weapons: 16 cannons (d12/ea), 8 small cannons (d10/ea), range: 10/30/50., Note: May only fire 50% of guns at one target once every three turns.

Small Ship: Cost: Affordable to most., Scale: Large, Maneuverability: Standard, Body/HP: 10, Speed: Moderate, Crew: 12, Psg: 8, Cargo: 5 tons, Weapons: 6 cannons (d12/ea), range: 10/30/50., Note: May only fire 50% of guns at one target once every three turns.

Sample Modern Vehicles

Car: Cost: Affordable to most. Scale: Medium, Maneuverability: Standard, Body/HP: 8, Speed: Moderate, Crew: 1, Psg: 4, Cargo: 500 lbs.

Fighter Jet: Cost: Only large governments and megacorps can purchase., Scale: Very Large, Maneuverability: Advantage, Body/HP: 10, Speed: Fast, Crew: 1 or 2, Psg: 0, Cargo: None, Weapons: Guns (d10), range: 30/50/100; 4 missiles (d12/ea), range: 0.5 mile / 2 miles / 5 miles.

Motorcycle: Cost: Trivial cost., Scale: Medium, Maneuverability: Advantage, Body/HP: 7, Speed: Moderate, Crew: 1, Psg: 1, Cargo: None

Sports Car: Cost: Affordable to the very wealthy, governments, and corps., Scale: Medium, Maneuverability: Advantage, Body/HP: 8, Speed: Fast, Crew: 1, Psg: 1, Cargo: 200 lbs

Tank: Cost: Only the richest individuals, most governments., Scale: Medium, Maneuverability: Standard, Body/HP: 16, Speed: Moderate, Crew: 3, Psg: 1, Cargo: 500 lbs, Weapons: BFG (character scale, see gear), Main Gun (6d6), range: 1/2 mile / 1 mile / 2 miles.

Sample Sci-Fi Vehicles

Air Cycle: Cost: Trivial cost., Scale: Medium, Maneuverability: Advantage, Body/HP: 8, Speed: Fast, Crew: 1, Psg: 1, Cargo: None

Capital Ship: Galaxy Class Destroyer. Cost: World governments and star empires only., Scale: Immense, Skill: Command, Maneuverability: Disadvantage, Body/HP: 19, Speed: Very Slow, Crew: 5,000, Psg: 500, Cargo: 100 kilotons 30 starfighters., Weapons: 100 AA Guns (d12, Fighter scale), range 1/3 /5; 32 Plasma Cannons (d12), range 5/10/15; 6 100 Megaton Warheads (d20+d20), range 15. Only 50% of guns or cannons can be on any one target at any time.

Mecha: Cost: Only the richest individuals, most governments., Scale: Large, Skill: Mecha, Maneuverability: Standard, Body/HP: 16, Speed: Moderate, Crew: 1, Psg: 0, Cargo: None, Weapons: Punch (d10, melee); Arm Gun (d12), range: 400 yards / 1/2 mile / 1 mile.

Star Fighter: Cost: Affordable to the very wealthy, governments, and corps., Scale: Very Large, Maneuverability: Advantage, Body/HP: 11, Speed: Very Fast, Crew: 1 + 1 Robot, Psg: 0, Cargo: None, Weapons: Twin Guns (d12), range: 1/3/5.

Star Yacht: The choice of beginner smugglers. , Cost: Only the richest individuals, most governments., Scale: Very Large, Maneuverability: Standard, Body/HP: 14, Speed: Fast, Crew: 2, Psg: 8, Cargo: 50 tons

SAMPLE CHARACTERS BY GENRE

Elite Enemies & Challenge Rating

To create a more powerful version of an enemy, give them more HP and allow them to take multiple actions, effectively treating the one enemy as though it were several, the specific number of which is called the Challenge Rating (CR) of the enemy. For example, a CR 2 Elite Zombie would have 12 HP and could attack twice per turn or attack once with d6+d6

All Genres Characters

Average Human: 3 HP, 7 STR, 7 DEX, 7 INT, 7 CHA. Skills: Proficient in two skills. Combat: Hand-to-hand d4. Gear: As needed by profession. Your basic everyman.

All Genres Creatures

Bear: 6 HP, 15 STR, 13 DEX, 2 INT, 5 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Claws (d8+d8), bite (d10). Aggressive, 9’ tall reddish-brown bears found in mountains, woodlands, and prairies. They prefer to eat fish and meat, and are not opposed to attacking the rare unfortunate to cross their path.

Boar: 3 HP, 12 STR, 10 DEX, 2 INT, 5 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Tusks (d6). Omnivorous wild boars that dwell primarily in forests. Not naturally aggressive, but dangerous if disturbed. Critical Damage: Gores its victims, causing great loss of blood.

Dog: 3 HP, 10 STR, 12 DEX, 2 INT, 7 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Bite (d6). Bulky, domestic breeds with a ferocious nature. Track by scent. Once started, very difficult to put off the trail. Only attack at their owner’s command.

Elk: 3 HP, 3 HP, 13 STR, 11 DEX, 2 INT, 5 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Antlers (d10), kick (d8). Any large herbivore.

Elephant: 9 HP, 16 STR, 6 DEX, 2 INT, 5 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Tusks (d10). Large tusked animals that dwell near hot forests. Found both alone and in herds. With enough open ground for a clear run, it will charge its victims, enhancing damage. Its tusks can be sold for high amounts of gold if removed whole.

Gorilla: 6 HP, 14 STR, 10 DEX, 3 INT, 7 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Fists (d6+d6). Large, muscular apes that dwell in hot jungles. Mostly peaceful until provoked, but will impose itself on the presence of its young. Critical Damage: Rends the victim for 1d4 extra STR damage.

Horse: 4 HP, 14 STR, 10 DEX, 2 INT, 6 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Kick d8. Can pull a cart or wagon. Saddle up.

Horse, War: 6 HP, 1 ARMOR, 14 STR, 10 DEX, 2 INT, 5 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Trample (d8). Not scared by noise or battle. Can be ridden in battle. Costs 200 gp to buy. Can carry up to 4 slots of items, if not mounted, but are usually ridden.

Snake, Pit Viper: 3 HP, 12 DEX, 2 INT, 3 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Bite (d6). 5' long snakes with grayish scales, found in caves and other dark places. Does not rely on vision, instead, senses its victims by their body heat. Critical Damage: The poison kills the target in a day if a antidote isn't applied.

Snake, Spitting Cobra: 3 HP, 14 DEX, 2 INT, 3 CHA (proficient in Willpower). Combat: Acid spit (d6). 3' long snake with gray and white scales. Notably shy, live in places where they can blend in. Attack from distance with their acidic spit, always aiming for the head of the target. Critical Damage: The acid corrodes the target's face, permanently damaging its visage and senses.

Its piercing howls can be heard for miles away, and are capable of calling regular wolves to its aid. Mundane attacks are Impaired against the werewolf, but weapons made of silver are Enhanced. Critical Damage: The target becomes infected, transforming into a werewolf by the next full moon.

Zombie: 6 HP, 10 STR, 6 DEX, 3 INT, 3 CHA. Combat: Rusted weapon (d6). Slow, mindless re-animated corpses. Created by wicked wizards to serve as guardians in hordes. Simply attacks anything that comes nearby. Cannot be affected by anything that targets the mind.

MAGIC

The casting of magic spells is part of some settings. This optional system can be used as a guideline for handling spellcasting. It is a flexible, contemporaneous system, though the GM and players should discuss the limitations of magic within the setting at hand. The GM should consider whether certain applications of magic should be banned or “gatekept” behind special perks.

In many settings, the use of spells will require that the caster has a perk, such as Spellcaster. In addition, the caster will need a particular skill. The default skill for this is Arcane (INT), but the spellcasting skill might be a CHA if magic depends on the caster’s force of will.

The Limitations of Magic in a Setting

- Does magic require the Spellcaster perk, or can anyone do it?
- Can magic bring someone back from the dead?
- Can magic be used to change the past or travel through time?
- Can magic perform permanent transformations?
- Does magic require some special material component to work?
- Is spellcasting obvious?
- Is magic always obvious?
- Do some spells or types of magic require special training beyond basic sorcery?
- How often can you use magic. Does it take Fatigue? Can you cast a spell until you fail at casting it, where you can't cast it again until you rest? Can you cast as many spells per day as half your Arcane (INT) score, rounded up?
- Most settings that include magic will have at least some limitations on magic.

CAIRN STYLE MAGIC

The following are the rules Cairn uses for magic. It's your world; can use as much or as little of it as you like.

In Cairn characters do not need the Spellcaster perk to b able to use magic.

Spellbooks

- Spellbooks contain a single spell and take up one slot. They cannot be easily transcribed or created; instead they are recovered from places like tombs, dungeons, and manors.
- Spellbooks sometimes display unusual properties or limitations, such as producing a foul or unearthly smell when opened, possessing an innate intelligence, or being legible only when held in moonlight.
- Spellbooks will attract the attention of those who seek the arcane power within, and it is considered dangerous to display them openly.

Casting Spells

- Anyone can cast a spell by holding a Spellbook in both hands and reading its contents aloud. They must then add a Fatigue to inventory.
- Given time and safety, PCs can enhance a spell's impact (e.g., affecting multiple targets, increasing its power, etc.) without any additional cost.
- If the PC is deprived or in danger (such as during combat), the GM may require a PC to make a Arcana (INT) save to avoid any ill-effects from casting the spell. Consequences of failure are on par with the intended effect and may result in added Fatigue, the destruction of the Spellbook, injury, and even death.

Scrolls

Scrolls are similar to Spellbooks, however:

- They are petty.
- They do not cause Fatigue.
- They disappear after one use.

Relics

Relics are items imbued with a magical spell or power. They do not cause Fatigue. Relics usually have limited use, as well as a Recharge condition.

Relics

Relics are items imbued with a magical spell or power. They do not cause Fatigue. Relics usually have a limited use, as well as a recharge condition. A few examples:

Honeyclasp , 3 charges. A rusted ring that shrinks the bearer to 6" tall. Recharge: place in a thimble-sized cup of royal jelly.

Falconer's Friend , 1 charge. A bolt-shaped wand carrying the Haste spell. Recharge: fire from a crossbow and recover.

Staff of Silence , 1 charge. This blackened rod temporarily disables all magic within 50ft. Recharge: bathe in the light of a full moon.

Leycap , 1 use. Anyone ingesting this green-flecked mushroom loses a Fatigue, but is then required to make a Willpower (CHA) save to avoid its addictive properties. A fail leaves the PC deprived and unable to focus until they can eat another leycap, providing only a brief reprieve from the addiction.
